WELCOME TO OUR THROWBACK ISSUE

With the holidays approaching, it is a fine time to reflect on friends, family and all the things that make life meaningful. Why not take in one of the programs offered as part of our line-up of Fall Family Fun?

Please see page 8 to find one at library near you. Or get a jumpstart on planning your holiday feasts by attending a holiday-themed Cuisine Corner program.

As part of the throwback issue, it's only natural to put an emphasis on history. OCLS makes it easy to capture and preserve history in a variety of ways. You can share important memories and moments through our Orlando Memory project. Meanwhile, our EPOCH (which stands for Electronically Preserving Obituaries as Cultural Heritage) allows people to create lasting legacies for deceased loved ones. Further details on Orlando Memory and EPOCH appear on page 12 and 13.

In the spirit of the season, the library is pleased to present Thanksgiving in the Colonies at the Orlando Public Library on Sunday, November 23 at 3 p.m. Local author Mark Daniels will share a colorful portrait of a colonial Thanksgiving. Daniels is the author of A Call to Arms and Sleeping in the Middle of the Bed. Join Benjamin Hewes, the main character of both of Daniels' latest books, for a trip back in time to early harvest celebrations. Happy Thanksgiving!

THE THROWBACK ISSUE

Jo Anne Feldstein modeled in New York City for more than a decade during the late 1940s and 1950s. "It was the best time," she said. "The war was over, fabric was available, people had jobs. Everything was go."

Following her modeling career, Feldstein returned to school to earn her master's degree and then went on to pursue her Ph.D. in sociology at the City University of New York (CUNY). She left CUNY with all but her dissertation completed toward her doctorate. Feldstein devoted the second half of her professional life to helping people with addictions through a 23-year career with a substance abuse clinic in New York.

Feldstein retired to Orlando in the mid 1990s and was immediately drawn toward the library. She said, "I love the library so much. It's one of the best things about Orlando." Feldstein has been volunteering in the Friends of the Library Bookstore since 2006.

Interested in how you can help the library?

The Friends of the Orange County Library was created in 1947 as a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization and has been a solid foundation of support for the library ever since—raising funds and educating people on the importance of the library in the community. Volunteers through this organization staff the Friends of the Library Bookstore and the Gifts & Greetings shop at the Orlando Public Library as well as a variety of volunteer opportunities at the branch libraries. Please visit oclsfriends.info for more information.

LOCAL HERITAGE FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS.

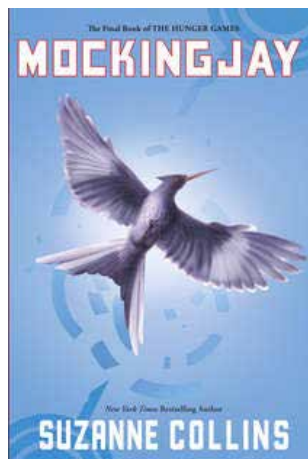

PRESERVING LOCAL LEGACIES
epochlegacies.org

The Orange County Library System has recognized that the community holds immeasurable history and culture that is not being recorded and preserved. The tradition of publishing obituaries in local newspapers is rapidly declining, making it detrimental to preserve local history and future genealogical research. EPOCH, Electronically Preserving Obituaries as Cultural Heritage, allows family and friends of the deceased to submit a detailed obituary of their loved one and share a meaningful memory with the community.

Orlando Memory is a digital collection of the story of Orlando, Florida as told by its residents. Developed by the Orange County Library System, Orlando Memory aims to capture and preserve the stories, images and memories of the community. Anyone can register for free to submit photos, video clips, audio recordings or other memorabilia. With your help, Orlando Memory will become a mosaic of collections that evolves from our local heritage and traditions.
